

Candidate Number
------------------	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

Please stick the barcode label here

HKDSE 2016
ENGLISH LANGUAGE
PAPER 1 PART B2
QUESTION-ANSWER BOOK

B2
DIFFICULT SECTION

Write your Candidate Number and stick a barcode label in the space provided on this page.

Read Texts 8-10 and answer questions 47-75. (43 marks)

Text 8

47. Which word in paragraph 1 suggests that the food truck business can be extremely unpleasant?
_____
48. Why does the writer mention trucks leaving at 3:30 in the morning to get a good parking spot?
_____
49. The word 'duo' (line 26) refers to _____
50. Which of the following suggests the food truck was successful?
A. 'they sunk their life savings into the truck' (lines 11-12)
B. 'attracted lines around the block' (line 15)
C. 'The odds were stacked against them' (line 17)
D. 'Exhausted by the hustle' (line 22)
51. Use information from Text 8 to complete the following fact file. You may write your answers in point form. DO NOT use the same answer more than once when completing the fact file.

A B C D
○ ○ ○ ○

Fact file on: *Mexicue

Reasons for opening the food truck (2 marks)

- _____
- _____

Reasons for the company's initial success (2 marks)

- _____
- _____

Answers written in the margins will not be marked.

Answers written in the margins will not be marked.

Challenges faced by the company

(3 marks)

- _____
- _____
- _____

Changes made to the company's operations

(2 marks)

- _____
- _____

Text 9

52. What is the writer critical of in paragraphs 7 and 8?

(2 marks)

---

---

53. According to paragraph 8, how are food trucks different from food courts and restaurants? Name two differences.

(2 marks)

---

---

54. Which word in paragraph 8 is used to signal a change in topic? _____

55. What does the writer imply when he writes, 'People act as if tacos, dumplings, or brick oven pizza have somehow been "discovered" by food truck cooks' (lines 44-45)?

- A. They have a good understanding of food.
- B. They pretend to like the food served from food trucks.
- C. They are over-estimating the originality of food trucks.
- D. They have not eaten tacos, dumplings or brick oven pizza before.

A B C D
☐ ☐ ☐ ☐

56. What does the word 'seriously?' (line 47) say about the writer's attitude to the magazine's claim? He thinks the claim is...

- A. ridiculous
- B. very serious
- C. rather vague
- D. unimportant

A B C D
☐ ☐ ☐ ☐

57. Why does the writer feel that certain people prefer buying ethnic food from food trucks rather than buying from ethnic restaurants?

---

58. In what way does the writer feel that food trucks are useful?

_____

59. According to paragraph 10, why is the food truck parked across from the pizzeria redundant?

_____

60. What does 'wanna-be "chefs"' (line 62) suggest about the writer's opinion of food truck chefs?

_____

61. What does the phrase 'More a fad than a trend' (line 62) suggest?

- A. Food truck popularity won't last.
- B. Food trucks sell low-quality food.
- C. Food truck owners are not trendy.
- D. Food trucks provide tangible benefits to most consumers.

A B C D
☐ ☐ ☐ ☐

Text 10

62. Find a word or a phrase in paragraph 11 that could be replaced by 'unsurprising'?

_____

63. The writer suggests food trucks are more suspect than restaurants because _____

_____

64. Which word best describes the writer's tone in paragraph 11?

- A. angry
- B. worried
- C. frightened
- D. humourous

A B C D
☐ ☐ ☐ ☐

65. Decide whether the following statements are True, False, or the information is Not Given in paragraph 12. (3 marks)

Statements

T F NG

- i) San Diego makes it harder for food trucks to operate than Baltimore.
- ii) People illegally buy and sell food truck licences in New York.
- iii) Baltimore has more food trucks than Miami.

☐ ☐ ☐
☐ ☐ ☐
☐ ☐ ☐

66. Which of the following best summarizes the main idea of paragraph 12?

- A. Many American cities have food trucks.
- B. New York has a cap on food truck licences.
- C. Many American cities have strict controls on food trucks.
- D. The black market makes controls on food trucks expensive.

A B C D
☐ ☐ ☐ ☐

67. Why is the correspondent described as 'intrepid' (line 75)?

_____

68. What does 'it' (line 76) refer to? _____

69. What point is the writer making in paragraph 13?

- A. The regulations are too strict.
- B. Food truck food is safe to eat.
- C. Food truck food is unsurprising.
- D. The regulations have stopped her being killed.

A B C D
☐ ☐ ☐ ☐

70. In paragraph 14, which of the following is NOT given as a complaint about food trucks?

- A. The standard of hygiene is low.
- B. There are not enough inspections.
- C. They take business away from restaurants.
- D. They reduce the attractiveness of the areas they operate in.

A B C D
☐ ☐ ☐ ☐

71. What does the term 'roach coaches' (line 81) suggest about food trucks?

_____

72. According to paragraph 15, what regulation does the writer feel is unreasonable?

_____

73. Why has it taken so long to introduce food trucks to Alexandria?

_____

74. What does the writer want her readers to do when she says, 'Chow down on that.' (line 88)?

_____

75. Look at Texts 8-10 and match them to the list of alternative titles in the column below. Write the correct number (8, 9, 10) in the box on the right. One title is NOT used and should be marked with an 'X'.

(3 marks)

Titles

Text 8 / 9 / 10

i) How regulators keep cheap food out of hungry mouths.

ii) Food trucks fueled by fusion cuisine.

iii) Food trucks are no more than foodie hype.

iv) Food truck business pushes a new model.

END OF PART B2

PART B2

Read the following texts about food trucks and answer questions 47-75 in the Question-Answer Book for Part B2.

Text 8

FORBES<sup>1</sup> | SMALL BUSINESS

Mexicue Moves Beyond the Food Truck

[1] The arrival of food trucks to New York several years ago was greeted by a city hungry for refined street food, willing to pay higher prices to reward hard-working culinary entrepreneurs. But, what was initially a story of success, as the Mexicue truck can attest, quickly became a nightmare.

[2] Initially, the food truck business model looked attractive. As Mexicue co-founder Thomas Kelly told Forbes sitting in the top floor of their store on Seventh Avenue, the truck was cheaper, offered lower risk than opening a restaurant and allowed him and partner David Schillace to test out their concept without having to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars. While they sunk their life savings into the truck, putting it together cost less than $100,000.

[3] As early adopters, the Mexicue crew saw explosive growth. Their first day, parked in midtown Manhattan surrounded by the skyscrapers that investment banks call their home, the Mexicue truck attracted lines around the block. Early on, they were making $2,000 to $3,000 on good days. The happy days of the food truck dream are long gone, though.

[4] The odds were stacked against them. Competition in New York City is ferocious, and the food truck business is no different. Mexicue found itself struggling to find good parking spots, a major factor in food truck success, as other trucks would leave as early as 3:30 in the morning to secure a solid location. The New York Police Department, seeing mobile vendors flood the streets, started aggressively handing out tickets, while regulators began to crack down on the industry.

[5] Exhausted by the hustle, Schillace and Kelly made a U-turn and in 2011 opened their first brick-and-mortar store. Located on Seventh Avenue, it complements their previous expansion into catering (which got them through their first winter). Next to the volatile food truck business, running a restaurant appears as a balanced, steady task. Without having to tough it out through inclement weather or ticket-issuing cops, the duo knows what to expect on most days, seeing a steady stream of revenues.

[6] While the truck is no longer a cash cow, it remains integral to their brand and image. A billboard on wheels, the truck still serves food at festivals, corporate events and even weddings.

Text 9

FORBES | LIFESTYLE

America's Worst Food Trends

[7] Having covered food for more than 15 years, I've seen a lot of trends come and go. Some recent developments have been great, but not every food trend is good, and some astonishingly stupid trends have thrived. Here are some of the worst offenders.

[8] Food trucks: There is nothing wrong with the individual food truck per se, but the overall trend is both ridiculous and in some cases, morally reprehensible. The food media continues to treat these as a new form of cuisine and some sort of breakthrough invention when they are nothing more than a way to deliver food to consumers, akin to the "invention" of home delivery, takeout containers or the drive through. When grouped together in parking lots, food trucks become an outdoor version of a longstanding American culinary tradition – the shopping mall food court, and nothing more. Foodwise, there is nothing new about trucks which serve foods you can already get in countless traditional eateries, albeit with much more limited menus. People act as if tacos, dumplings, or brick oven pizza have somehow been "discovered" by food truck cooks.

<sup>1</sup> Forbes is a business magazine featuring articles on finance, investing and successful companies.

50 [9] One major magazine recently suggested that food trucks had brought affordable ethnic cuisine to the people of Los Angeles – seriously? LA has always had hundreds of brick and mortar eateries serving exactly this kind of affordable ethnic cuisine. I think that one of the reasons for their hipster popularity is that food trucks bring such cuisine to people who are afraid to go to actual ethnic restaurants in diverse neighborhoods to eat it. Ironically, in many markets the food trucks do more harm than good to the existing restaurants on which they are patterned, competing unfairly with rent-paying establishments while cannibalizing hard-to-get public parking spots and squatting on public property.

55 [10] Admittedly in some markets, like LA, food trucks can serve a real purpose, bringing quality dining selections to extremely pedestrian-unfriendly areas, especially near office buildings where nothing else is available within walking distance. But these practical food trucks are nothing new – such trucks and carts and sidewalk vendors always existed. The real trend is the redundant food truck – like one serving pizza parked across the sidewalk from a rent paying pizzeria. When I visit New York, I see trucks parked curbside in 60 neighborhoods overflowing with good and diverse restaurants and having no need at all of food trucks. This strikes me as absurd. In many cases these are merely a lower barrier to entry for wanna-be “chefs” who can’t actually start a restaurant. More a fad than a trend, I’ve yet to see any tangible benefits of the food truck craze to the average consumer.

Text 10

65 THE ECONOMIST<sup>2</sup> | NEWS | UNITED STATES

Movable Feasts

70 [11] FOOD is risky. You can choke on a hot dog, be poisoned by a pizza or die slowly from years of eating too much. Clearly, businesses that sell food are suspect. And what could be more suspicious than an outlet that sells food—and then drives away before its customers expire? It’s small wonder that so many American cities frown on food trucks.

[12] Miami makes it extremely hard for them to operate, as do Baltimore and Chicago. Rochester, Pittsburgh and San Diego are nearly as stern. In New York City, a cap on the number of food-truck licences available has created a black market, pushing up prices into the thousands of dollars.

75 [13] How bad can food trucks be? Your intrepid correspondent sampled injera with tilapia from one serving Ethiopian nosh in Washington, DC. As The Economist went to press, it had not yet killed her. Perhaps this is unsurprising: food trucks are typically required to cook their food in inspected commercial kitchens.

80 [14] Nonetheless, they stir up fury. Local restaurants complain that they steal customers and pay no rent. Officials worry that their garishness will lower the local tone. Many think they are just filthy (“roach coaches” is the sneer).

85 [15] After years of legal wrangling, Alexandria’s city council in Virginia has at last decided to allow food trucks in parks and parking lots. Not in the streets, mind. The experiment starts in July, and the typically mean-spirited conditions are there to protect the immobile restaurant trade.

[16] Such rules are misguided. Not only is street vending an important step for aspiring entrepreneurs, but food trucks have enlivened the gastronomic scene and generated new business—and local taxes—wherever they have been allowed to roam. Chow down on that.

<sup>2</sup> The Economist is a news magazine which covers current affairs, politics, business and the global economy.